“ Donna is my youngest sister. As it turned out, she was my mother's last child and 5 weeks after she was born, my first child, Mea Lynn Marie was born. So they grew up together and started first grade in the same school. They loved telling the other kids that they were aunt and niece respectively. Donna grew up in a household with older parents who adored her and unlike the rest of us, had the attention of our parents exclusively. As she grew it was evident that she was very bright and energetic. My family moved away from the school that they girls had first attended and through a divorce Mea lived with her father for awhile in Colorado. Because of varied circumstances, at the end of their time in high school, both girls lived with my second husband and me and attended the same high school the last semester of their senior year.

Over the years Donna has worked in several industries and most recently in real estate. I just found out that she had someone in her life who loved her very deeply, so I was happy to hear of that. I love you baby sister and know that you are no longer in pain because of your illness. Love, Barbara Brennan

“ For Donna, my dear baby sister,

Tonight I called you to wish you Happy Birthday. I was surprised to hear a man answer, but thought maybe this was someone special, maybe a boyfriend or your husband. I wouldn't have known because we have not talked for years. I was glad someone answered the phone, as the few times I have called in recent years, there was no answer and I could only leave a message. I hoped maybe I would get to talk to you this time. So this man, Dave, asked my name, and I said I was “Justin, Donna's sister”. A moment's hesitation. I thought he was telling you who was on the phone, and I wondered if you would talk to me this time. Dave told me that you passed away yesterday.

I'm sending this message to you c/o God, because I know that's where you will get it. I have always loved you through these years we were apart, and I will always love you. And I know you love me. Thank you for being my sister.

I am so happy that you had Dave and Jasper in your life. Dave says he loved you very much, and I am so grateful he was there for you.

“ To Dave - Donna's Loving Partner

I didn't realize how much you and Donna cared for each other until I visited you a couple of years ago. You were so proud of her and she seemed to feel the same way about you. After so many years of both being alone it was wonderful that you were able to find each other. Time will heal your heart. Stay strong Dave.

Love ya
Mom
